

---

[14]Poster presentation

---

[14-4]Situation leading to the abuse of men who care for their wives and mothers

*Midori Nishio<sup>1</sup>, Sayori Sakanashi<sup>2</sup> (1. Japanese Red Cross Kyushu International College of Nursing(Japan), 2. Fukuoka University(Japan))

Presentation language : Japanese

It is considered that emotional exhaustion appears as abuse to the care recipient, suicide in the care recipient and the caregiver, or ill-treatment of the caregiver itself. To prevent abuse, it is recommended to identify the factors that lead to mental problems. We studies that clarify the situation of men the abuse, which are specialized for men who care for women with dementia.

We surveyed a total of 100 male primary caregivers. 56 men (61.6%) who had or were about to become abused, 44 (48.4%) who had free description of their feelings of abuse were subject to qualitative analysis.

Obtained approval from the Ethics Review Committee of Fukuoka University School of Medicine (2017M40).

The average caregiving period for male caregivers was 103 months, and all felt social difficulties. "Difficulty of communication" and "attack of men by caregivers" were extracted as situations leading to abuse. The "difficulty of communication" subcategory consists of "do not follow instructions" and "repeat the same thing", and the "male caregiver attack" subcategory consists of "attack", "denial", and "exile" Will be done.

When a man takes care of a woman with dementia, the conditions that lead to abuse are thought to result in long-term communication difficulties and social difficulties.

View the presentation file