

Kyushu University's multidisciplinary disaster prevention education for students near nuclear power plants after 2016 Kumamoto earthquake

*Megumi Sugimoto^{1,2}, Silvia Peppoloni²

1. Kyushu University, 2. International Association for Promoting Geoethics

Kyushu University start disaster prevention education program 2017 Kumamoto earthquake. This multidisciplinary disaster prevention education program me was requested to professors by students after the 2016 Kumamoto earthquake. Kyushu University is located at 32 km from Nuclear power plant Genkai has restarted already. Medical doctors, oceanographers, meteorologists, seismologists, volcanologists, hydrologists natural hazard management specialists, artists and designers join this program too. We would like to introduce this program in our presentation.

Keywords: Risk mangement, Urgent Protective action planning Zone, Geoethics, specialization, Disaster prevention education for students, evacuation from nuclear accidents