These days, weather is forecasted by supercomputers, but people in the old days anticipated the weather using the weather proverbs. We think that in the present age where climate change is occurring, the success rate is low. In this research, we observe and record the shape of clouds and changes in weather at school and calculate the success rate with the data measured by the Japan Meteorological Agency. From the result, we will select a highly desirable weather proverbs those are suitable for present Osaka.
